Product Description

60000 Brooding Poultry Battery Cage System for Baby Chicks in Bangladesh

Our Pullet Cages, also known as Baby Chick or Brooding cages, are designed to accommodate chicks from day 1 to 105 days old. Typically, birds are transferred to layer cages at around 11 weeks of age. Following a strict 30-day cleaning, disinfection, and fallow period, the housing is securely prepared for the next flock.

We can design a complementary chick house for your layer raising project. This cage system significantly enhances stocking density, reduces construction and land costs, and improves key performance metrics including survival rate and feed efficiency.

System Advantages

Feeding pan for 0-day chicks ensures optimal accessibility and feeding uniformity to meet the physiological and behavioral needs of newborns.

Q235 mesh wire without burr to protect the feather and skin of baby chicks.

Convenient to observe the growth of chicks, also convenient for grouping and selection.

Automatic timing manure removal system effectively reduces the disease infection rate and mortality of chicks.

Feed trough and water line are equipped with adjustment devices to effectively meet the daily feeding and drinking needs of chicks at different growth stages.

Equipped with automatic feeding equipment, water supply system and manure cleaning system for full automation.
